A review from the Saint Louis Courier of Medicine and Collateral Sciences, Volume 4: THE present generation is conversant with pathological anatomy, only as a supplement of the clinic. As a rule, the clinical teacher determined while the patient was alive, which organ was to be the object of investigation; and the autopsy, likewise, was usually confined to that organ, or at least with all the others only in a secondary manner. The clinical anamnesis, consequently, determined the course of the anatomical examination. We all know what was the result. The fact is, that we can further the advance of medical science in the most essential manner, by acquiring the habit of submitting all the other organs of the body to a minute examination; for it is obvious that we can do as much by anatomical as by clinical examination. This exposition by Virchow, in 1859, gives the key to the method of post-mortem examination, stated and explained in the book before us, a method which has received the official sanction of the German government, and is imposed...
